Trends in Latin from the early Middle Ages to 1931

Abstract
This thesis investigates trends in study and usage of Latin from the Early Middle Ages to 1931. Separate chapters describe these trends in national context of France, 1550-1931; Germany 1400-1931; England 670-1931; and the United States 1630-1924 and 1924-1931.

This thesis investigates trends in study and usage of Latin from the Early Middle Ages to 1931. Separate chapters describe these trends in national context of France, 1550-1931; Germany 1400-1931; England 670-1931; and the United States 1630-1924 and 1924-1931. Some of the defects of the present organization are: (1) that information gained in the classroom functions little if at all outside the classroom, (2) that the pupils assume a "get by" attitude and consider the performance ... Trends and developments. Anna Reinikka | Joensuu, Finland. This article traces the history of Latin parsing grammars from Late Antiquity up to the 14th century, focusing on the group of texts with the incipit Dominus quae pars. These grammars circulating mainly north of the Alps were intended to be studied at the elementary and intermediate levels of education following the study of the Donatus minor. History of Linguistic Thought in the Early Middle Ages ed by Vivien Law (= Studies in the History of the Language Sciences, 71), 145–191. Amsterdam & Philadelphia: John Benjamins. Luhtala, Anneli. 2000 “Excerpta da Prisciano, Diomede e Pompeo compilati da Pietro da Pisa nel codice Bruxell. II 2572".