Ethnomedicinal Importance of Pteridophytes Used by Reang tribe of Tripura, North East India

S. Shil, Assam University Silchar
M. Dutta Choudhury, Assam University Silchar

Abstract

The present study mainly focuses on the ethnomedicinal importance of Pteridophytic floras used by the Reang tribes of Tripura state, India. As many as 16 pteridophytic plants species belonging to 14 genera and 10 families are presented in this research article. The botanical name, family name, vernacular name, habit, and their ethnomedicinal uses are provided.

Recommended Citation